РОЛЬ РУБАЙ В ТВОРЧЕСТВЕ ДЕХЛЕВИ

DEHLAVIY IJODIDA RUBOIYNING O‘RNII

ANNOTATION

The article provides data on the manuscripts of Amir Khusrow Dehlavi's heritage, especially the manuscripts stored at the Institute of Oriental Studies named after Abu Rayhan Biruni under the Academy of Sciences of the Republic of Uzbekistan, and their research on rubai's.

The manuscript that we have reviewed illustrates the origin of the ghazals. However, no mention is made of where rubais came from. The order of giving of the rubai's is not based on any principle in many manuscripts. It can be clear that only a few of them are in alphabetical order, either by the first letter of ruba’i or by the last letter of the rhyme. It is worth noting that the mixed circulation of the rubai’s of the five divans in the manuscript may be attributed to the longstanding tendency of the poet’s devotees to try to fit into one collection.

The basic source for the research on the rubai of Amir Khusrow Dehlavi can be the manuscripts of the poet kept at the Institute of Oriental Studies named after Abu Rayhan Biruni under the Academy of Sciences of the Republic of Uzbekistan. Afterward, we will be able to eliminate the deficiencies in their publications and draw large-scale ruba’is into the analysis. The materials on the rubai’s of Amir Khusrow Dehlavi which were published in Kanpur, Tehran, Dushanbe did not adequately cover the poet’s works. Therefore, they can only be used as auxiliary resources for research. Our research on the rubai’s shows that the manuscripts of the Institute of Oriental Studies named after Abu Rayhan Biruni under the Academy of Sciences of the Republic of Uzbekistan are reliable and significant sources for the compilation of the poet's poems in this genre. The view of past and present experts on the inability to collect the poetic heritage of Amir Khusrow Dehlavi should also be relevant to his rubai’s. However, it is possible to create the largest collection of rubai’s of Amir Khusrow Dehlavi based on the manuscripts of funds of Uzbekistan. The great number of manuscript copies of Amir Khusrow Dehlavi allows us to determine when and how many rubai’s were copied. This elucidates the need to research to determine the spiritual and aesthetic needs of the time.

В статье приводятся данные о рукописях наследия Амира Хосрова Дехлеви и их исследованиях по рубае, хранящихся в Институте востоковедения имени Абу Рейхана Бируни при Академии наук Республики Узбекистан.

Рассмотренная нами рукопись иллюстрирует происхождение газелей. Однако, она не упоминает о происхождении рубае. Во многих рукописях порядок подачи рубаеов не основан на каком-либо принципе. Понятно, что только некоторые из них расположены в алфавитном порядке, либо по первой букве рубае, либо по последней букве рифмы. Стоит отметить, что смешанная циркуляция рубаеов пяти диванов в рукописи может объясняться давней тенденцией, преданных поэтом, пытаться вписаться в одну коллекцию.

Основным источником исследований по рубае Амира Хосрова Дехлеви могут служить рукописи поэта, хранящиеся в Институте востоковедения имени Абу Рейхана Бируни при
Академии наук Республики Узбекистан. После этого мы сможем устранить недостатки в их публикациях и привлечь к анализу крупномасштабных рубаи. Материалы по рубаи Амира Хосрова Дехлева, опубликованные в Конпуре, Тегеране, Душанбе, неадекватно освещали произведения поэта. Поэтому их можно использовать только как вспомогательные ресурсы для исследований. Наши исследования на рубаи показывают, что рукописи Института востоковедения имени Абу Рейхана Бируни при Академии наук Республики Узбекистан являются надежными и важными источниками для составления поэтических поэм в этом жанре. Взгляд прошлых и настоящих экспертов на неспособность собрать поэтическое наследие Амира Хосрова Дехлева также должен относиться к его рубаи. Однако можно создать самую большую коллекцию рубаи Амира Хосрова Дехлева на основе рукописей фондов Узбекистана. Большое количество рукописных копий Амира Хосрова Дехлева позволяет нам определить, когда и сколько было скопировано рубаи. Это объясняет необходимость проведения исследований для определения духовных и эстетических потребностей того времени.

All the ruba’is of Amir Khusrow were included in the five divans and works in his lifespan. M. Baqyev who studied Amir Khusrow Dehlavi for a long time writes that it is difficult to determine the exact amount of ruba’is of Amir Khusrow Dehlavi (Baqoev M., 1975, p 204). According to his investigations, Amir Khusrow wrote himself that he placed 262 ruba’is in “Vasatul-Hayat”, 360 ruba’is in his “Baqiyat Naqiyat”. The majority of ruba’is in the other divans can be found in the observations of M. Baqyev. He analyzed the composition of Devons, based on copies of manuscripts of Amir Khusrow Dehlavi which were preserved in the former Soviet Union. By examining these studies, we can suppose that the ruba’is should be placed in the divans, as follows (Baqoev M., 1975, p 157-208):

“Tuhaft us-Sighar” – 127 ruba’is;
“Vasat ul-Hayat” – 262 ruba’is;
“Ghurrat ul-Kamol” – 420 ruba’is;
“Baqiyat Naqiyat” – 360 ruba’is;
“Nihayat ul-Kamal” – 42 ruba’is.
Total: 1211 ruba’is.

There are many manuscripts of Amir Khusrow Dehlavi’s works in the manuscript collection of the Institute of Oriental Studies named after Abu Rayhan Biruni under the Academy of Sciences of the Republic of Uzbekistan. Uzbek scholar B. Musayev researched for a long time on the manuscripts of Amir Khusrow Dehlavi (Musayev B., 1976, p 53). He worked on Dehlavi’s first devan called “Tuhaft us-Sighar” or, more exactly, on his ghazals, and prepared a scientific-critical text of these ghazals. This article did not address other genres except ghazals. Hence, we could not discover any comments on ruba’is.

Famous orientalist of Uzbekistan, Quovomiddin Munirov studied the manuscripts of Amir Khusrow Dehlavi’s works and published 54 descriptions (Munirov Q., 1975, p 53). The descriptions of the manuscript we have used in our article are not here given. Since they can be found in the book by K. Munirov and SVR catalogs - Volume II (1952), Volume VI (1963), and Volume IX (1971). Furthermore, it should be noted that in these descriptions, the existence of the poems of the ruba’i genre, which is the subject of our study, is seldom noticed.

Our observations in the funds of the Institute of Oriental Studies named after Abu Rayhan Biruni under the Academy of Sciences of the Republic of Uzbekistan show that most manuscripts do not fully reflect the five divans of the poet. Additionally, as we looked closely at the manuscripts of this fund, it was revealed that 10 ruba’is (1837 total) of divans, which we can find and observe, were included in the ruba’is. Other divans were made up of ghazals or qasidas. Among the manuscripts, there are divans arranged only with ghazals or qasidas. Apart from this, we can not find any ruba’is them.

Furthermore, there are numerous poems, lithographic versions, which also complement the scope of our research object. For instance, in the manuscript fund of the Institute of Oriental Studies named after Abu Rayhan Biruni under Academy of Sciences of the Republic of Uzbekistan, under number 1099, in the copy preserved under the name “Rubayiat Pahlavan Mahmud”, the ruba’is of Hafiz Sherazi, Abdurahman Jami, Abdurahman Mushfiqi and ruba’i examples of Amir Khusrow Dehlavi are placed. This copy was completed in the month of Ramadan in 1296 hijra (1879 CE) and From the 23b to the 41a pages of this manuscript, there are 139 ruba’is of the poet.

Additionally, studies of the poet’s work show that there are many manuscripts of Amir Khusrow Dehlavi in the world manuscript funds. We can observe them in the studies of many researchers. For instance:

In the Library of the Faculty of Oriental Studies at St. Petersburg State University, Amir Khusrow Dehlavi, Devan—inv. No MS. 094, 1622.

At the St. Petersburg Public Library named after Saltikov-Shchedrin. Dorn Catalog—inv. No. 388 No. 387.

At the British Museum—No. Add 21104. No. Add 25807.

In the St. Petersburg Department of the Institute Oriental Studies of the Sciences Academy of the Russian Federation—inv. No. V 169 (there are 868 ruba’is).

The regular occurrence of Amir Khusrow Dehlavi’s manuscripts in the popular manuscript funds of the world does not infer that their discovery is over. The works of Amir Khusrow have been widely disseminated in the manuscript. They are found not only in several manuscript funds throughout the world but also in private libraries of science and literature enthusiasts. Consequently, the search for the manuscript of Amir Khusrow's works, which is not known to the scientific community, and the determination of their scientific value, remains one of the most pressing issues in the field of Khusrow Studies.

The study of manuscripts in the manuscript treasury of the Institute of Oriental Studies named after Abu Rayhan Biruni under the Academy of Sciences of the Republic of Uzbekistan showed that the distribution of ruba’is in these sources was so diverse. The following is a brief description of the manuscripts included in this fund:

Manuscript No. 178 (SVR, Vol.II, 113 pp. No. 1001; No. 1 in Q.Munirov Catalog). It is called...
"Kulliyati Amir Khusrow", but this is not a "kulliyat" (collection), it is a set of qasidas, masnawi, and ruba'is. It includes the introduction of "Ghurrat-ul-Kamal" (15th century), qasidas (605–1995), and 401 ruba'is (200–2356). K.Munirov believes that the first and the last of ruba'is is insufficient. This is because the part of the copy that contains the ruba'i starts with the second couplet of rubai. After the rubai's, "Miftah-ul-Futuh" follows. The copy does not specify the penman's name and year of change. K.Munirov says that the paper was copied in the 14th century, relying on external characters (Catalog, p.12). According to Sh. Shomuhamedov and B. Musayev, it is thought that this manuscript was copied during the time of the poet ("Amir Khusrow Dehlavi", p.12). Written in a large Naskh letter. Size 282 pages. The rubai portion starts with "بكونجذب", and it ends with "بُرسُد". The procedure for giving the ruba'i is not based on any principle. That is, neither the startings nor rhyming of the ruba'is are subordinate to the alphabetical order.

Manuscript No. 965 (SVR, Vol.II, p.116, No.1008, No.33 in Munirov Catalog). "Devon Khusrow". After ghazals in the pages 382b–414b, there are 389 ruba'is; there is no opening or end of the manuscript. It belongs to the late 16th century. Size 414 pages. The rubai portion begins with "بکنمن", and it finishes with "بگولنج". It is based on the alphabetical order of rhymes.

Manuscript No. 2114 (SVR, Vol.II, p.115; No.38 in Munirov Catalog). It is written in beautiful nasta'liq style with black, red, golden scripts. After ghazals, qasidas, and qita's, there is about 220 rubai (198 in the main text and about 20 in the margins) on pages 436a–456b of the manuscript. The rubai part begins with "بکنمن", and it finishes with "بگولنج". It is well organized.

Manuscript No. 2219 (SVR, vol.II, p.114; No.24 in Munirov catalog). "Devani Amir Khusrow Dehlavi". There are 55 rubai's on pages 399a to 407b of the manuscript. It was copied in 12 Ramadan, in 902 / 14.05.1497. The size is 403 pages. The part of the manuscript in which the rubai was placed is freely arranged (not in alphabetical order). It begins with "بکنمن", and it ends with "بگولنج".

Manuscript No. 2220 (SVR, Vol.II, p.119, No.119; No.39 in Munirov Catalog). "Devon Khusrow Dehlavi". There are 277 ruba'iyat's placed from pages 452b to 482a. Outwardly, the copy dates back to the 18th and 19th centuries. The size is 483 pages. The rubai part starts with "بکنمن", and it finishes with "بگولنج". Rubai's are given in the alphabetical order of the opening couplets.

Manuscript No. 4421 (not available in SVR; No.37 in Munirov Catalog). "Devani Khusrow Dehlavi". There are the introduction, qasidas, various selected ghazals from the first four divans. At the end of the copy, there are 88 rubai's from pages 343a to 352b. It was copied at the end of the seventeenth and early eighteenth centuries. The size is 352 pages. The rubai part starts with "بکنمن", and it finishes with "بگولنج".

Manuscript No. 7070 (not available in SVR; no.29 in Munirov Catalog). "Devon Khusrow Dehlavi". There are 103 rubai's from pages 310a to 320b of the manuscript. It was written by Haidar Haydari Jami. The size is 320 pages. The rubai part starts with "بکنمن", and it finishes with "بگولنج".

Manuscript No. 7071 (not in SVR; no. 46 in Munirov Catalog). "Rubayati Amir Khusrow Dehlavi". There is 140 rubai on pages 1b–37a. After them, the rubai's of Hafiz, Jami, and Bedil come. On the European paper in 1317 / 1899–1900, it was copied by Muhammad Yaqub master Qurban niyaz in Khiva. The size is 37 pages. The rubai part begins with "بکنمن", and it finishes with "بگولنج".

Manuscript No. 7624 (SVR, Vol. II, p.110, no.1009; No.34 in Munirov Catalog) "Entekhobi Devane Amir Khusrow Dehlavi". It is a selected collection from the first four books of the poet. Ghazals make up the majority of it. In the last pages (226b–232a) there are 74 rubai's below the heading "Rubaiyat fit-Tawhidi Boriy Taolo". A few pages are missing from the end of the manuscript, which is also if licensed by the ruba'i part. Outwardly, the manuscript was copied in the 17th century. It is 232 pages. The rubai part starts with "بکنمن", and it finishes with "بگولنج".

Manuscript No. 9677 (not available in SVR; No.23 in Munirov Catalog). "Devoni Khusrow". First, there are ghazals, then 92 rubai'sin pages 309a–318b. It was copied by Abbas Ibn Pir Uvays. Written in 884 / 1479–80. The size is 318 pages. The rubai part starts with "بکنمن", and it finishes with "بگولنج".

Although some 15 other manuscripts of Amir Khusrow Dehlavi are called "Devani Amir Khusrow Dehlavi" in the Institute of Oriental Studies named after Abu Rayhan Biruni under the Academy of Sciences of the Republic of Uzbekistan, they do not include rubai's. Also, manuscript No. 902 "Devani Amir Khusrow Dehlavi" which is stored in the department of H.Sulaymanovin the Institute of Oriental Studies named after Abu Rayhan Biruni, includes only ghazals. There is no rubai in the 17th-century manuscript of "Devani Amir Khusrow Dehlavi", which includes only qasidas, parables, and other poems in the genre.
The overall number of ruba'is in "Devani Khusrow" collected in these manuscripts is more than 1,500. There is a range of defects in these manuscripts. We excluded duplicate ruba'is in various versions and found over 700 ruba'is.

According to Prof. Sh. Shomuhamedov, Bedil was the most influential poet in the history of Persian literature (3861) (Mirzo Abdulqodir Bedil., 1986, p 5). From our observations, we can see that Amir Khusrow Dehlavi’s ruba’i is considerable. However, it is hard to determine the total number. Additionally, there are several new ruba’is in the manuscript that do not appear in other copies. Nevertheless, in any case, they are all about the high contribution of the poet's poetry in this genre. We believe that the ruba’is, which we have considered, compared, and collected within our capacity, can provide adequate material to carry out comprehensive research on them.

At the same time, among other works by Amir Khusrow Dehlavi, it is clear that his ruba’i also present in sufficient quantity and at the same time worthy of being an object of deep study and analysis.

The subsequent general conclusions can be drawn from a detailed analysis of the manuscript copies of ruba'is of Amir Khusrow Dehlavi, which is stored in the manuscript collection of the Institute of Oriental Studies named after Abu Rayhan Biruni under the Academy of Sciences of the Republic of Uzbekistan:

The manuscripts we reviewed mentioned the origin of the ghazals, but no mention of ruba'is origin.

The order of giving of ruba'is is not based on any principle in many manuscripts. Just a few of them are in alphabetical order, either by the first letter of ruba'is or by the last letter of the rhyme (Copies of the storage number are 965, 2220, and 7070).

The mixed transmission of ruba'is of the five divans in the manuscript can be attributed to the long-standing tendency of the poet's devotes to one collection.

It is famous that rubai is one of the genres extensively used in the classical literature of the East. As one of the genres of the lyrical species of rubai, it has been a separate research topic in literary criticism (Khaqqulov I., 1986, p 6). Undoubtedly, the emergence of rubai is related to folklore. Its origin is associated with folk songs. Some of the four of them are called Tarana (melodies) or dubayti, however, they are essentially close to ruba’is. Nevertheless, they do not meet the requirements of the ruba’i. Therefore we cannot call these poems a ruba’i (the ruba’i is written as a four-line (or two-couplet) poem, with a rhyme-scheme AA BA or AA AA (Khojiahmédov A., 1978, p 24)).

According to K. Zalman and I.S.Braginsky, in Persian literature, the roots of the ruba’i genre traces to Avesta (Braginskiy I.S., 1956, p 206). Some researchers, including Iranian literary scholars, believe that the ruba’res originated in Persian literature and later appeared in Arabic and Turkish literature (Kozmoyan A.K., 1981, p 7). E.E.Bertels also linked the beginning of ruba‘is to pre-Islamic times but said that it was not yet so common in the Samanids’ period. According to him, this form of poetry spread through Sufi poetry (Bertels E.E., 1935, p 36). Nevertheless, the earliest examples of the ruba’i are understood can be found in the works of Rudaki (860-941). Only 50 ruba'is of his were preserved. In the works of Shahidi Balkhi (d. 936), Persian and Arabic rubai are can be found. Ibn Sina (980–1037), a prominent scholar in the field of medicine, also created wonderful ruba’is.

Omar Khayyam (1040–1123) in the Persian literature of the eleventh and twelfth centuries, with unprecedented success with philosophical rhymes. There were also ruba’is in the works of Afzaliddin Hakani (1112–1199) and Nizami Ganjavi (1141–1203). The well-known poet and author of the 13th century, the famous poet Saadi Sherazi, also created beautiful ruba’is. Numerous ruba’is of Abusaid Abulkhair (895-962) Sayfiddin Bokharz, Unsafe, Farrukhiy, Manuchehri, Azraqi, and Muizzi were popular in the history of literature (Kozmoyan A.K., 1981, p 11).

Amir Khusrow Dehlavi, with its mature and attractive ruba’i, took a worthy place among them.

Amir Khusrow Dehlavi created his ruba’i with deep study and creativity of folklore and traditions of written literature, as well as the secrets of rubai writing in Persian-Tajik literature. He was able to fully reflect his poetry skills in the ruba’i genre and was able to convey any idea vividly and colorfully. Amir Khusrow achieved unprecedented results both in the compact and bright formulation of content and its four-dimensional form of philosophical generalization.

Among the works by Amir Khusrow Dehlavi, there is a distinctiveness of the place of ruba’is written by him in different genres. It is evident from the very first glance at them that it is impossible to fully understand the works of the poet without these ruba’is. Although the great poet seems to have told his story through the poems of Khamsa and his five divans, the possibilities of the ruba’i genre are as striking as the compact reflection of the spiritual atmosphere in all of these works.

Even our first observations reveal that his poems in this genre made a significant contribution to the development of the rubai’i genre in general.

The first poem, Amir Khusrow was passionate about writing poetry since his early childhood. He said himself in "Ghurratul-Kamal" that "from my childhood, I used to read poetry and pour pearls in my mouth", in his another work - the first devan "Tuhfat us-sighar": "My father sent me to school and
I used to repeat rhymes, and Master Sa'duddin Muhammad was teaching calligraphy. I would write poems instead of letters. In my childhood, I used to write poems and ghazals that would amaze adults. There is a story that reveals that he had a great talent for writing poetry in his childhood:

One day, the deputy mayor of the city had called the calligrapher-Khodja Asil Sa'duddin Muhammad to his house to write a letter. Khusrow also came with his mentor Sa'duddin. All of a sudden, Mawlana Khodja Azizuddin also visited Khodja Asil's house on that day. The calligrapher Sa'duddin introduced his student Khusrow to Khodja Azizuddin: "Mawlana (knowledgeable person), this little boy has just started speaking and singing some poems. Attempt and see if he can achieve anything." Khodja Azizuddin handed over a poem to Khusraw and asked: "Come on, my son, read a poem from this passage". Khusrow recited one of the poems with a charming and melodious voice and bowed his head in front of gathered people. Everyone was amazed by Khusrow’s recitation of the poem and they began to cry, "Great!”, "Great!”. Khusrow’s mentor, calligrapher Saududdin, addressed Mawala Khodja Azizuddin and said, "Try this boy's disciple too". Mawala Khodja Azizuddin ordered Khusrowto make a poem using numerous words such as "muy" (hair), "bayza" (seed), "tir" (spear), "kharbuza" (melon) which were inaccurate in terms of meaning and form. Khusrow simultaneously reads the rubai with a sweet voice:

هر موی که یلیفت سیاه آن صنعت است
چون تیری بدان راست دلش را زیراک

Meaning:
Any black hair is a sham,
There are a hundred testicles of pruning in that hair.
Because the arrow to the right of heart hurts –
His teeth, like melons, are hidden inside.

As we have seen, Amir Khusrow wrote his first poem in the form of a rubai, when he was very young. A divine talent was the reason for his rapid progress.

According to sources, the lover of poetry read Amir Khusrow Dehlavi's works with love and made numerous attempts to collect his immense legacy (of course, there were rubai's among them). In the fifteenth century, Timurids start to collect and rewrite the works of great writers and poets. In particular, among many other collections works by Baysunghur Mirza, the son of Shahrukh's middle son, because of his great love for Persian literature, he ordered to collect and make the divans of the works of Abulqasim Firdavsi, Nizami Arazu Samarkandi, Saadi Sherazi and the lyrical works of Amir Khusrow Dehlavi. Baysunghur Mirzadid a great job in "collecting" of Amir Khusrow Dehlavi's huge poetic legacy, which was prevalent over many centuries. His efforts were expressed with joy in the work "Tazkirat ush-Shuara" by Davlatshah Samarkandi. He wrote: "The scholars were not able to assemble the divans of Amir Khusrow, because of thinking honestly, they knew that the river would not fit into the envelope. After collecting 120,000 couplets of poetry by Amir Khusrow, Baysunghur Mirza found new other 200,000 couplets and he realized that it was hard to collect all his legacy, and he never stopped collecting them (Davlatshohk Samarqandiy, 1981, p 88).

Later, the ruler of Khurasan Sultan Hussain Bayqaro also followed in the footsteps of the famous Prince Baysunghur Mirza and collected 18,000 couplets of poems by Amir KhusrowDehlavi (Davlatshohk Samarqandiy, 1981, p 88).

Alisher Navai, who reminisced Amir Khusrow Dehlavi as a “sweet and miraculous poet” and used some the ghazals of Amir Khusrow Dehlavi in his poems, also mentions regarding another person in his work “Majalis un-Nafais”:

"Mawala Muhammad Muammal. He was called Piri Muammain. He was a gentleman. There were no more people to collect Amir Khusrow's poems and musannafats..." (Alisher Navoiy, 1961, p 48). On the one hand, this shows that the collection of poems by Amir Khusrow, which began to be collected in the early fifteenth century in the Khurasan, by contrast, poet Muammain was engaged in writing poems and collecting the literary heritage of Amir Khusrow Dehlavi. This means that he did it with his love of the poetry of Khusrow.

Certainly, the difficulties of collecting the poems of Amir Khusrow Dehlavi also have their reasons. It is known that Amir Khusrow Dehlavi was one of the most prolific poets in the history of Oriental poetry. According to the historian Davlatshah Samarkandi, the poet wrote in one of his treatises that the poems of Amir Khusrow Dehlavi are less than 500,000, and more than 400,000 couplets. Even in the twentieth-century research on the work of Amir Khusrow Dehlavi, it is observed that poems written in various genres on the poets devan do not appear in the amount stated by the author (Baqoe M., 1975, p 204).

Khusrow's lyrical works (qasidas, ghazals, rubai's, qit' ah, tarjiband, tarkibband, muamma, etc.) are collected in five divans. Amir Khusrow Dehlavi was popular in Persian poetry, as a first ghazal poet. That's why, Alisher Navai, the Sultan (King) of Ghazal, one of the great Oriental poets, considers Amir Khusrow Dehlavi a great mentor, alongside Hafiz Sherazi and Abdurahaman Jami, and expresses deep respect and calls him "Sahiri Hind" which means "Indian Magician":

Three people are masters in ghazals,
There is not anyone better than them.
One is the miracle maker, Indian magician,
His words hurt the people of love (Alisher Navoiy, 1990, p 516).

Such fame, certainly, gained by the poet, of course, called for the reproduction and republication of his works at all times. As we have seen, scholars and poets tried to gather Amir Khusrow's poems and books and also the rulers and others initiated. As a consequence of such hard work, it is true that many ruba'is were relocated and recopied the heritage of Amir Amur Khusrow and illustrated the creative skill of the poet. As a result, his books were given special attention, such as "Rubaiyat Khusrow Dehlavi" (inv. 7079) and "Shahr-e jasho Majmua Rubaiyat" was created. In 1886 in Lakhnav and 1889 in Bombay, the poet's ruba'is were published in lithographic style as a separate book. The reason for this is that the poet's ruba is close to a famous genre. But none of them illustrates the origin of ruba.

In the tradition of Oriental classical literature, ruba'is play a key role in the creation of poets. In most cases, the devan of poems is created on this basis. The same is true for Amir Khusrow's works. Based on this, we were interested in the printed editions of the divans in search of rubai by Amir Khusrow Dehlavi.

In the manuscript collection of the Institute of Oriental Studies named after Abu Rayhan Biruni under the Academy of Sciences of the Republic of Uzbekistan, there is a printed edition of Kanpur under number 12708. This book was published with the name of "Kulliyati Anosiri Davavini Khusrow" in 1871 (M. Bakayev wrote with regret that he did not find the publication). The publication was mostly based on the first four divans of the poet and was repeatedly published in India (1874, 1878, 1899, 1910). Unluckily, only 37 rubai's were comprised in this edition (pages 460–466). The publication lists the ghazals in alphabetical order and from which devan they came from, but in rubai's, we do not see such signs. We could not find any other lithographic records.

Amir Khusrow Dehlavi's Devan or "Devani Kamil" was published in 1343/1964 in Tehran. The book contains ghazals (pp. 35–71), qasidas (pp. 575–603), qit' as (pages 607–611), and 93 ruba'is (pp. 615–625). It means only 8 percent of them are ruba'is. However, it also allows for some degree of observation of the skill, artistic style, and ideological layers of the poet's work in this area.

We want to share some of our comments on the text of rubai's given here. First of all, it should be noted that the text writer M. Darvesh wrote in the preface of the book that Amir Khusrow's devan was the first publication in Iran. For this edition, a lithographic book and a copy by Yusuf Binni Yaqub Bayazi, 963/1555, and well-preserved. He used the oldest copy for this book. According to M. Darvesh, the defect in the manuscript was corrected as much as possible with other copies. But, he did not mention which other copies he used. Even a printed copy used by M. Darvesh remained unclear. But, in a live dialogue with the text writer B. Musayev in Tehran, it is known that it was Konpur edition (Musaev B. M., 1969, p 9). When we compared these two editions, it became obvious that all 37 rubai's in Devan were included in "Devani Kamil".

It is clear from the manuscripts of Amir Khusrow Dehlavi that the manuscripts in the Institute of Oriental Studies named after Abu Rayhan Biruni were traditionally compiled (№ 178, 9661, 7624 and others). From our point of view, Ruba'is was considered a minor genre, so no one mentioned about their origins. When we compare the text of rubai's in the manuscript and the publications (Tehran, Kanpur, and Dushanbe), we see that there is a lot of textual differences. It is noteworthy that many of them were corrected in "Devani Kamil". For instance:

1. In the manuscripts, the couplet (No. 965/ 382α

   ميخواهم دل و بجان ترا پنئم من. (I, your slave, desire you with all my heart) was given in "Devani Kamil" (624-6) with "ميخواهم دل و بجان ترا عشق من". Though the formality of the rubai here does not diminish, the difference between the meaning of these verses is obvious. In the first case, the lyrical hero's wish is the lover, and in the second case, his love. The word "slave" in the manuscript forms is repeated only once. Therefore, the line seems a bit confusing and the word "love" is clearly explained in "Devani Kamil".

2. This is the case with another ruba'i in "Devani Kamil" (p. 624):

   تا چند مرا زمیم او میرانی
   تا مار بدست دیگران گیرانی

Meaning:
O heart, you are destroyed because of a girl,
How long should I remember her?
You said that If you want it, pull it off her hair,
You want to grab a snake with someone's hand.

In the manuscript No. 965 (page 382α), the word جنگری (banished). Perhaps the result of the error of the calligrapher, the manuscript was violated in the manuscript of the ruba’s nature. The couplets must end with the same word, and the word must be rhyme. Hence, the couplets require an internal rhyme. The ending of the fourth verse with the word جنگری (gīrānī - holding) shows that rubai has not
At the same time, this word (گیر) provides the soundness and logic of the couplet. Hence, it is clear that in the first copy of rubai’s in the manuscript, a letter error was made. Here again, the version in “Devani Kamil” was right.

3. There are majority of words that are different from rubai's below, that their consequences are very different in “Devani Kamil” (p. 622):

The first couplet of the poem has some miscomprehending that "When my lover left, my heart had the pain". If the phrase ژیره پارب in the same way as the Dushanbe edition (1975, p. 879) بیار بیار and the consequences come. If we put the word "nuh" in place of the word which is given in "Devani Kamil", then the poet will claim, "Everything I do is well-organized". Then, the question arises as to why the poet mentioned Nizamuddin Awliya.

There are also cases of misuse of words in the publication:

When my peace was from Sheikh Nizam,
I keep on enjoying good things,
So I hope to achieve the goal,
That’s why everything I do is organized.

The phrase ژیره پارب (that’s the way) in the fourth verse of this rubai, is given in the form "Devani Kamil" in the form of (because), which undermines the status of Nizamuddin Awliya in the rubai. In the couplets dynamics, the poet relates all his accomplishments to his mentor, until he eventually reaches the fourth verse and reveals the secret of his work. That is, the causes are intertwined and the consequences come. If we put the word "suhan" (Manuscript 7624) instead of the word which is given in "Devani Kamil", then the poet will claim, "Everything I do is well-organized". Then, the question arises as to why the poet mentioned Nizamuddin Awliya.

There are also cases of misuse of words in the publication:

When my lover left, my heart had the pain,
I had a shorthand to hold the skirt of my lover,
I stared at the soil of her path,
She went away and I had only two eyes fixed on the road.

We notice the same in the following rubai’s. In manuscripts it has the following forms and content:

Fell into the hands of the crazy boys.

It is found in the first verse in the manuscripts, instead of "(in the mouth) افادات بریان ("suffered damage") was used in "Devani Kamil" (p.617). The second couplet, the word قزمه از د زمان (from the suffering of the time), it was given with زینه زار “From a Waiting Attitude to a Flame” (?) in the form of abstract compounds.

When comparing the rubies in "Devani Kamil" with those of ruba'i's stored at the Institute of Oriental Studies named after Abu Rayhan Biruni under the Academy of Sciences of the Republic of Uzbekistan, two aspects of the picture attract our attention.

It is possible to eliminate the defects of rubies in the manuscripts of the Institute of Oriental Studies named after Abu Rayhan Biruni under Academy of Sciences of the Republic of Uzbekistan with the help of ruba'i is printed in "Devani Kamil".

With the help of manuscripts of the Institute of Oriental Studies named after Abu Rayhan Biruni, it is possible to eliminate the defects in the manuscript used to compile "Devani Kamil".

As we have seen, it is useful to look at the various forms of ruba'i in different manuscripts to evaluate them in detail.

Thus, the following conclusions can be drawn from our research in the context of ruba'i's of Amir Khusrow Dehlavi:

1. The basic source for the research on the ruba'i's of Amir Khusrow Dehlavi can be the manuscripts of the poet kept at the Institute of Oriental Studies named after Abu Rayhan Biruni under the Academy of Sciences of the Republic of Uzbekistan. Afterward, we will be able to eliminate the deficiencies in their publications and draw large-scale ruba'i's into the analysis.

2. The materials on the ruba'i's of Amir Khusrow Dehlavi which were printed in Kanpur, Tehran, Dushanbe did not enough cover the poet's works. Hence, they can only be used as auxiliary resources for research.

3. Our research on the ruba'i's shows that the manuscripts of the Institute of Oriental Studies named after Abu Rayhan Biruni under the Academy of Sciences of the Republic of Uzbekistan are reliable and significant sources for the compilation of the poet's poems in this genre.

4. The view of past and present experts on the inability to collect the poetic heritage of Amir Khusrow Dehlavi should also be relevant to his ruba'i's. Nevertheless, it is possible to create the largest collection of ruba'i's of Amir Khusrow Dehlavi based on the manuscripts of funds of Uzbekistan.

5. The great number of manuscript copies of Amir Khusrow Dehlavi allows us to determine when and how many ruba'i's were copied. This elucidates the need to research to determine the spiritual and aesthetic needs of the time.
